Arising out of the rebellious mood at the beginning of the twentieth century, modernism was a radical approach that yearned to revitalize the way modern civilization viewed life, art, politics, and science. This rebellious attitude that flourished between 1900 and 1930 had, as its basis, the rejection of European culture for having become too corrupt, complacent and lethargic, ailing because it was bound by the artificialities of a society that was too preoccupied with ...

A notable characteristic of modernism is self-consciousness concerning artistic and social traditions, which often led to experimentation with form, along with the use of techniques that drew attention to the processes and materials used in creating works of art.

Modernism - Wikipedia

Although it often "quoted" popular culture, modernism was marked by a deep suspicion of all things popular. Its entry into the museum and the academy as official culture was undoubtedly made easier (despite its declared antagonism to 'bourgeois philistinism') by its appeal to, and homologous relationship with, the elitism of class society.

the title of this book is a bit misleading. The Cold War ended around 1989-90, but Whitfield takes us up to around 1965 in this book. It is an interesting look at the culture of the early war, including books, movies and music. Without footnotes, I question some of his assertions, but he does make some good points.

The Culture of the Cold War by Stephen J. Whitfield

Modernism is quite able to respond to the changing time, to catch the feel when- "Things falling apart/ centre cannot hold.". Modernism does not give much freedom to the characters of a text, but it is preferable in the context that it possesses a definite boundary a fixed genre, which makes the text interpretable.

The modernist is the first to spot the television. He meticulously takes the set apart and puts it back together. He describes with great enthusiasm the principles behind such things as the cathode ray tube. Rather bored with the modernist's approach to the new device, the postmodernist sits in the comfortable chair across from the television.
